All-Star "Erminie" To-Night.

The last comic opera of the season will be presented at English's to-night, and as the occasion will witness the appearance of the favorite comedian, Francis Wilson, surrounded by an unusually fine company, in the charming old "Erminie," there is every reason to look forward to one of the most delightful performances of the entire composition, well suited to stand on its additionally satisfying. Mr. Wilson has given the old piece an exceptionally elaborate revival, according to all accounts, the scenery and costumes being of dazzling beauty. But best of all will be the completeness of the cast. Mr. Wilson will, of course, be seen once more in his famous old character of "Caddy," the mischievous rascal who carries the greater portion of the fun on his shoulders. William Broderick, one of the best bassos on the comic stage, will appear as Ravennes, the bold, dashing robber. Marguerita Sylva, the popular prima donna soprano, will sing the title role-a part in which her pleasing voice and magnetic personality should show to great advantage. Jessie Bartlett Davis, the distinguished contralto, and a great local favorite, will be the Captain Delauney, the sort of character in which she is at her best. Clara Belle Jerome, a dainty soubrette, last seen here with Mr. Wilson in "The Toreador," will be the Gavotte; Jennie Weathersby will appear in her original character of the Princess, and the other leading parts will be filled by Signor Perugini, William C. Weedon and Robert Broderick. The sale of seats for Drei mal Hoch!" Mansfield has framed up an entr'acte programme of music composed entirely of German folk songs, student songs and familiar melodies, but the real flavor of the university is caught from the celebrated 'Burschen, heraus!" sung by a skylarking crowd of Saxonians. It's an old student song and is thus translated:

"Fellows, come out, come out, And join in the merry rout; When we hear the call of spring, Then aside the books we fling. Hang all your cares and come away; Let us be happy, praise the day.

Fellows, come out!" It is into this gay life that the unsophis-

Craig's candies are certainly goo gloomy, etiquette-encumbered formality of the dreary castle he has known as home. As he steps into this sweet haven Kathie comes forward and with unfaltering memory repeats a verse as she welcomes him with a bouquet, and immediately the air is rent with the strident old Latin hymn to youth, "Gaudeamus igitur." But this is not native to German universities alone. It has been made familiar to generations of American students. A nobleman of one of the swagger corps finds Karl Heinrich alone in the garden. He at once "rushes" the handsome newcomer for his corps, much as the Aemrican student "rushes" a newcomer for his "frat." He is busy making friends when, from a distant corner where the students are celebrating, there floats in the strains of one of the melodies which Max Eberwein wrote to one of Goethe's verses. The German student is fastidious about who shall write the words to the songs he sings. The Saxonian curiously mingles a joke with his truism when he asks: "Do you know where it is people study German poetry?" and pointing to the singers, answers: "It is here—at the university." At that moment the lusty boys break in with the "Ergo Bibamus" ("Let Us Drink."):

"We are here to do a most praiseworthy Then brothers, 'ergo bibamus!' There is still an old and powerful word.

It passes around and is everywhere heard, Resounding an echo from every hill; 'Tis beautiful 'ergo bibamus,' 'Tis beautiful 'ergo bibamus'!" The Mansfield production of the muchtalked-about play next Saturday afternoon is looked forward to with great interest, as is also his presentation of the power-

Theatrical Notes. "Hello, Bill!" a farce-comedy on ludicrous order, will renew its bid heaps one complication upon another until member of the company taking a hand in tying a knot in the seemingly endless string of amusing situations. There are two Bills in the piece, one of them making some great impositions on the name of the other. The impostor is impersonated by Harry Blakemore, who has been seen with Charley's Aunt," "Because She Loved Him So" and a number of other plays, and his talent is said to be well adapted to the part he takes in his present play. The supporting company includes Eugene Shakspeare, Robert Watt, William H. Woodside, Caroline MacLean and a number of others.

Miss Trixie Friganza finally has been chosen to play the American widow in "The the part in the Western organization dur-Westphalians, Saxo-Borussians, Rhinesians and Vandalians—cheer pretty Kathie, the ing the season and did so well in it that ing the season and did so well in it that ing the season and did so well in it that ing the season and did so well in it that ing the season and did so well in it that she was rewarded first by having the have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Dahlen, and when I was the guest of some artist girls their daughter, will much coveted privilege of going to England. Helen Bertram, the charming Indianapolis prima donna, now singing in vaudeville at the Grand, was the originator of the character of the widow in "Prince of Pilsen" and scored a great hit in the part.

It is understood that Charles Frohman is now making arrangements to introduce William Collier to the London public in the ican comedian in Augustus Thomas's comedy, "On the Quiet," and Richard Harding Davis's new farcical play, "The Dictator." The latter piece is now meeting with such success in New York that its run will probably be continued until well ticated Karl Heinrich is brought from the linto the summer.
